

CULBERSON URGED FOR PRESIDENCY

Representative Pujo Asserts That Senator From Texas Can Sweep the Country

DECLARES THAT BRYAN CANNOT HOPE TO WIN

Says Idea That Southern Man Cannot Be Elected Is an Exploded Falacy, and Calls on South to Assert Itself and Demand National Recognition.

Times-Dispatch Bureau. Muncie Building. Washington, D. C., April 26.—SENATOR CULBERSON, of Texas, is urged for the Democratic nomination to the presidency in a statement given out by Representative Pujo, of Louisiana, to-night. After asserting that it is impossible to elect Mr. Bryan, and showing how he cannot carry the States which are absolutely necessary to his election, Mr. Pujo says: "It is positive that Senator Culberston would carry New York and New Jersey, with fifty-one electoral votes, and that Connecticut and Delaware would follow the lead of these States. It would therefore only require fifteen electoral votes to assure a national Democratic victory, and Culberston could furnish necessary votes sufficient to elect the Democratic President. "As I stated before, the nation's extremity is the South's opportunity. It seems to me that the trend of Democratic possibilities, outside of the suggestions I have made, may possibly result in the States of Illinois, Ohio, Massachusetts, California, Nevada and even Massachusetts coming into the Democratic fold, providing the South will assert its power in the Democratic convention, and elect a man in the country, and thousands of the conservative element of the party, would support Senator Culberston from the day of his nomination to the night of his election. I do not consider it necessary to make a personal reference to Senator Culberston's fitness. "He has filled a large measure of public attention for many years, both in his State and the nation. He was Attorney-General of Texas for four years, Governor of the State for two terms, and has been a United States Senator for ten years, and is at the present time leader of the minority in that great body. By ability, training and experience, he is unsurpassed in times by any Democratic candidate mentioned for the nomination. Further, he has never known defeat. "It is time for the Democracy of the South to take into its hands its own fate, and take into its hands its own fate. It can nominate and elect Senator Culberston if it will. His nomination means the entering of a campaign with a reasonable assurance of success, with a platform in sympathy with the Democracy of Jefferson and a triumph at the polls in November, which means 'Equal rights to all and special privileges to none.'

HATS OFF, LADIES!

Teachers' Institute Voted Two Hours Before School. PITTSBURG, Pa., April 26.—If the ladies will kindly remove their abominable hats so that they can sit closely together in the front of the auditorium, we will proceed with the Institute," said Professor John Morrow, superintendent of the district, at the opening of the teachers' institute, which opened yesterday morning to the young women teachers who had assembled for the monthly institute. "Each woman was topped by a piece of headgear as big as a cartwheel. They raised their noses disdainfully. They had come as much to show their hats as anything else, and the suggestion that they remove them was absurd. "The institute shall not proceed until the hats are removed," declared Superintendent Morrow. Then began a battle which lasted for two hours. Professor Morrow seated on the platform and the teachers doing the best they could to be comfortable on straight-backed chairs, and trying to balance their hats. When the clock started on into the third hour the teachers began to capitulate. One after one the hats were removed, and when all heads were uncovered Professor Morrow opened the session.

SEVERE BLOW TO BRITISH NAVY

Discipline on the Warship Was Magnificent, the Officers and Men Remaining at Their Posts as Though No Tragedy Was at Hand.

LONDON, April 26.—The total number of dead and missing of the Gladiator's crew as a result of the collision between the American liner St. Paul and the British cruiser off the Isle of Wight is twenty-eight. Divers to-day searched part of the sunken cruiser for bodies, but were not successful in finding any. The opinion among shipping men and naval officers and officials appears to be unanimous that the accident was unavoidable, being one of the chances of the sea which all seamen must risk. There will be the usual board of inquiry, and an inquiry by the board of trade. The officers of both ships refuse to discuss the affair until they have given their testimony officially. All witnesses of the disaster agree practically that both crews behaved as well as possible.

BRIDGE BLOWN UP

Steel Structure Over Taunton River Destroyed by Dynamite. FALL RIVER, MASS., April 26.—The New Bristol county steel bridge, which is to connect this city and the town of Somerset, across the Taunton River, was badly damaged by a mysterious explosion of dynamite early to-day. The bridge, being built for the county at a cost of $750,000, and was to have been completed in two months. The police investigation to-day shows that a charge of at least fifty pounds of dynamite was exploded in the pier nearest the Fall River shore and was fired by the use of a fuse. The explosion displaced the heavy steel girders, and generally destroyed the framework of the bridge for fifty feet on either side of the pier. The entire north section of the city was shaken by the explosion, and window glass in nearly every house was smashed. Many people, who were awakened by the shock, rushed panic-stricken from their homes to the streets. The contractors are Holbrook, Cabot & Hollins, of Boston. They employ non-union workmen.

28 SEAMEN LOST WITH GLADIATOR

Naval Officers Declare That Accident Could Not Have Been Averted.

SEVERE BLOW TO BRITISH NAVY

Discipline on the Warship Was Magnificent, the Officers and Men Remaining at Their Posts as Though No Tragedy Was at Hand.

LONDON, April 26.—The total number of dead and missing of the Gladiator's crew as a result of the collision between the American liner St. Paul and the British cruiser off the Isle of Wight is twenty-eight. Divers to-day searched part of the sunken cruiser for bodies, but were not successful in finding any. There will be the usual board of inquiry, and an inquiry by the board of trade. The officers of both ships refuse to discuss the affair until they have given their testimony officially. All witnesses of the disaster agree practically that both crews behaved as well as possible.

Discipline Splendid

Interesting details concerning the collision and the rescue of the men of the British cruiser were told to-day by various passengers on the liner, J. T. Hills, of London, speaking of the delay in lowering boats from the St. Paul, said: "In response to our offer of assistance, the captain of the Gladiator replied that it was not needed. That accounts for the fact that some time—it seemed to me about twenty minutes—elapsed after the collision before the St. Paul's boats were put in the water. At that time the cruiser was turning turtle. "Some of the bluejackets on board of her cried, 'lower your boats.' As the vessel heeled over we could see the bluejackets climbing the upper side and the others failed to get a secure hold slipped into the water. "The discipline on the Gladiator was magnificent. We could see every man at his post. There was no excitement in either ship. One would have thought that it was a military exercise instead of a real disaster."

Penetrated Twenty Feet

The passengers on the St. Paul, who acted so coolly during the trying few minutes following the collision, could hardly have realized the danger in which they stood. They were assured by the officers that the collision was directly the boats came together, that there was no danger, but the condition of the steamer's bows, as she lies at the dock, shows that she had a narrow escape from meeting the same fate as the Gladiator. As it was, the St. Paul was more seriously damaged than at first supposed. She shipped a great quantity of water through her broken plates, and from the moment she backed away from the wrecked liner, she was under way. Her wharf, all her pumps were kept going to their full capacity. The damaged bows of the St. Paul indicate that she forced her nose at least twenty feet through the cruiser's side, but fortunately the greatest damage she sustained was above the water line. The bow post was buckled, while the plates on both the port and starboard bows were crushed in and gaping cracks extend along the side. First Serious Accident. Neither Captain Passow nor any of his officers would discuss the accident, preferring to wait until they can submit their reports to proper officials. It is learned, however, that Captain Passow is sorely grieved at the disaster, this being his first serious mishap. Had the cruiser been painted any other color than slate she might have been seen earlier and the collision avoided. Captain Passow decided that her warships attract less attention when thus painted, and what is considered the necessity of war purposes has contributed to a serious accident.

WORLD'S SUPPLY FOR FIFTY YEARS SECURED

NEW YORK, April 26.—For the first time in eighty years, and the second time in the history of the science of medicine, an operation for the extermination of the most deadly lance-head viper, said to be the most poisonous of all known reptiles, was performed to-day by Dr. Zedeno, of New York. The operation was a complete success, and as the result of the operation, a plentiful supply of the venom of the viper is available in the treatment of extreme cases of insanity and also of many of the malignant diseases. These extremely powerful nature of the lance-head's venom can be no better described, probably, than by the declaration of one of the patients who was operated on to-day. He announced that the supply was now ample to meet the demands of the world for at least half a century. He explained that this would provide for the most widespread use of the serum in all the malignant diseases, such as typhoid and marial fever, and diphtheria. So powerful is the action that it is prescribed only in the most minute quantities. The poison commonly used containing only one-trillionth of a grain. From that point the titration continues down to point where a few drops would be useless in attempting to describe it. Those who participated in the operation to-day were Dr. Zedeno, Dr. D. L. Dittman, Dr. St. Clair Smith, a leading homeopath, and Head Keeper Charles B. Snyder. Dr. Dittman seized the viper in a firm grip, and holding the reptile close to his body, with the hand pointing to the snake's head, Dr. Zedeno thrust into the snake's mouth the receptacle which had been prepared to receive the venom. The receptacle was at a point less than half an inch from the viper's nose, there was a lunge forward so quick that the eye could scarcely follow it, the mouth was thrown open, the lips which covered the cruel fangs were curled back, and with a snarl the jaws were sharply, and the poison, some half a teaspoonful, spurted harmlessly into the glass.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., April 26

The totals of death, misery and ruin caused in four Southern States by Friday's tornado came to hand to-day in approximately correct form. Briefly stated they are: Killed, 450. Injured, painfully or seriously, 1,200. Homeless, several thousand. Towns reporting serious wreckage, 46. Habitations and business houses practically complete ruins in these towns, about 2,500. The above figures do not include the wreckage on plantations and farms, scores of which were struck and damaged. The number of dead will never be known accurately, for the reason that about 300 of them were negroes, and they were buried in many communities without careful records being made of their numbers. While some of the first reports giving apparently reliable death lists have since proved untrue, nevertheless reliable places, which were late in reporting their death lists, have served to hold the total death list uniformly around 350.

Three Separate Storms

By following the wreckage of towns, the general direction of the tornadoes can be traced closely. Apparently the storm struck in three separate currents, each describing the arc of a circle and traveling toward the northeast. The first of these struck through northern Louisiana, Mississippi and into Tennessee before daylight Friday morning. The second appeared further south about breakfast time in central Louisiana and Mississippi. This apparently was the portion of the storm which swept on through Alabama and Georgia on Friday night and Saturday morning. The third portion of the storm appeared during Friday afternoon, further south than either of the preceding ones. This was the storm which demolished Amite, La., and Purvis, Miss., the two towns in which the wreckage was worst.

Buried Under Wrecks

Why the fatalities were so unusually large is apparent to-day from a glance at the mass of photographs which have arrived here, showing the many portions of the tornado belt. They all tell the same story. Whole blocks of what were formerly little residences and cabins lie spread over the ground in separate blocks. If a huge lumber pile had been scattered about, this was the number of individual boards, unattached to anything else could scarcely have been greater. Many of these
